The Population of New York. The census of the State of New York has just been taken in accordance with a constitutional provision providing that it shall be taken every ten years, beginning with the year 1865, and that the Senate State shall be apportioned upon the basis of this census. The census is not yet comored persons not taxed, a total of 1,023,250 as the population of New York City. This would give the city twenty-nine Assemblymen and seven Senators. The total population, including aliens, is over eleven hundred thousand, against 813,669 in 1860, 515,394 in 1850, 60,489 in 1800, 10,381 in 1756, and 1,000 in 1656. When the popupation of Brooklyn, Jersey City, Hoboken and Williamsburg are added to the city, as they properly should be, its population cannot be less than one million eight hundred

2. Careful examination of the nearly horizontal strata along the river shows that at certain points, for instance at Petroleum Centre, as well as Pithole, and all along the line from Pithole to Petroleum Centre, a slight rise and consecutive fall of the elevations and depressions is running in a northwest southeasterly direction, while the direction of the hills and exceptions is from northeast to southwest, and in some places due north and south ..

We have positive evidence that the growth of sea plants preceded the fauna on terra firms in the same way as the spoch o the fishes preceded that of reptiles; that the carboniferous era followed the Devonian epoch, the one passing gradually into the other, having the limestone and conglomother, having the limestone and conglom-erate as their dividing line.
7. We find coal on the hills of the Ess-

Sandy, near Franklin, and also three mile-from Pithole, and perhaps on other hills the Venango oil regions. No limestone or conglomerate has been yet reached. W have therefore evidently to do with the 8. Heavy earthquakes rolled once along thousands of miles in a south easterly and north westerly direction, forming the moun-tain ranges of a north-easterly and southwesterly direction, and, submerged deep at the bottom of a salt sea, as the Venango regions must once have been, the clay being plastic, bent in the slightly waving ines and left the sand-rock in a more or less broken condition, giving room to ex-panding gasses and distilling liquids.

These peculiar features of the ground strats seems to indicate fully that their direction is independent from that of the latter deposits and show plainly that were we to ascertain the highth above the level of the sea at which wells are sunk; the exact depth, thickness, physical and chemical pature of the various sandrocks in which we find the oil; how their thickness, nature | -- | and dip compare with that of other sec-tions—we could form a more correct idea of the formations and their cavities, and would perhaps be able to come to positive results, and not depend on the good or bad luck of professional oil-smellers, and mysterious guessing of men who want to dispose of their land at oil rates.

FROM THE 4th ARMY CORPS. Billitary Movements-Indianola-Per

DEAR LEADER: The Third Division of the Fourth Corps is encamped some miles up the country, having landed several days since. The First Division is either here or in transit from New Orleans. The Second comes on as soon as possible. As soon as the trains arrive the Divisions march for their respective destinations, viz : The First goes to San Antonio, the Second to a point midway between San Antonio and Austin, and the Third to Aussin. Corps headquarters will be at San Autonio.

The only means of transportation is water and at this season there is none. if such a mixture of aridity and torridity as this can savor aught of cool. For the present, supplies must; be propelled by mules over the entire route, though the railroad running to Victoria, some forty miles away, will be repaired as soon as possible, and continued thence on to San Antonio. The rebels have long since destroyed almost every ves-tige of it. Indianola is a small wooden town, which contained five hundred souls before the war, though ten days since there were but six male inhabitants in the town. It is situated twelve miles from the gulf on Matagorda Bay. A dangerous bar at the mouth prevents large vessels from entering. Small steamers run out along side, the troops and baggage are transferred, brought up to within half a mile of the town, and again reshipped on small lighters and brought to the shore. Long wooden piers formerly extended out to deep water, but she rebals being in need of fire wood de-stroyed them. They are being repaired, however. This town will be the depot for this department as long as the Fourth Corps remains in Texas, and that will probably be until the regular army is recruited to the the coast, as no water can be obtained here save from cisterns. The country, om New Orleans. The only convenience of which the town can boast is a commodious hotel, kept by Casimir, (with an un-pronounceable French twist for a sirname,) standing upon the beach. The accommodations here are limited. The furniture of a room consists of a mattress, a chair with a raw-hide seat, and a mosquito bar. The latter is so much of a necessity that issues have been made to all the troops of the Corps.

Uol. Charles Wood, commanding the Fifty-first Ohio, is stopping temporarily at the Casimir House. The presence of his charming little wife ought to alleviate the horrors of war, and make him contented with his lot, if anything can. So it seems to us jealous bachelors, at least. More all on board, and in a and last stores are win, through what is called the Gull stream. Not much more than eight miles as hour is expected to be made, partly owing to the recent reduction of boiler power, and partly to the extreme foulness of the vessel's bottom. At such a rate of going the Great Eastern ought to be off Valentia on Tuesday night, or at least Wednesday morning. In case of any adverse winds of strength sufficient to get up a sea, or in any way affect the vessel, no attempt whatever will be made to steam against them, and the ship will be simply turned into the nearest shelter. All the nautical authorities on board, however, are confident of fine, calm weather-a confidence which is certainly warranted not only by the present aspect of the skies, but also by the high state of the barometer. The engines both screw and paddle, which have just been turned, seem in excellent order, and if the ship was what she used to be in her early days it would puzzle the best of the steam yachts now around her to keep her in sight for an hour even with her twenty-five thousand tons on board. The signals just taken through the cable show its condition to be regular, with the same steady tendency to improvement both of insulation and "conductivity." The most entire confidence is expressed by the naval and scientific men that, with moderately fine weather, success is almost certain on

These cilicers have had the matter in progress for two months, but have not yet found time to hear all the ap-plicants, and of course have not made any decisions among them. It is probable that the city authorities will accept the same basis as agreed upon by this board, though horizontal strata of clay slate can be ascer-tained; the same is seen at Tarr Farm and Oil City—it is also visible at Franklin.
